Final Participation Report

We successfully worked in a team together last semester for CSCI 3308, so we quickly knew that working together again would go well. We all quickly came up with and agreed on the project topic. We collaborated on each milestone, and we felt that the work was distributed evenly. Emily created both Figma prototypes. Elena headed user testing by creating a survey to collect pre-prototype information and conducted user testing. Jaryd did the T-tests and statistical analysis as well as paper prototypes and the video. We all worked on the project presentation and the milestone documents together. We all felt we worked evenly and fairly across all stages of the project, and had even distribution of work, participation, and effort.
